deification in russian religious thought considers the reception of the eastern christian orthodox doctrine of deification by russian religious thinkers of the immediate pre revolutionary period deification is the metaphor that the greek patristic tradition came to privilege in its articulation of the christian concept of salvation to be saved is to be deified that is to share in the divine attribute of immortality in the christian narrative of the orthodox church god became human so that humans might become gods ruth coates shows that between the revolutions of 1905 and 1917 russian religious thinkers turned to deification in their search for a commensurate response to the apocalyptic dimension of the universally anticipated destruction of the russian autocracy and the social and religious order that supported it focusing on major works by four prominent thinkers of the russian religious renaissance dmitry merezhkovsky nikolai berdiaev sergei bulgakov and pavel florensky coates demonstrates the salience of the deification theme and explores the variety of forms of its expression she argues that the reception of deification in this period is shaped by the discourse of early russian cultural modernism and informed not only by theology but also by nineteenth century currents in russian religious culture and german philosophy particularly as these are received by the novelist fedor dostoevsky and the philosopher vladimir soloviev in the works that are analysed deification is taken out of its original theological context and applied respectively to politics creativity economics and asceticism at the same time all the thinkers represented in the book view deification as a project a practice that should deliver the total transformation and immortalisation of human beings society culture and the material universe and this is what connects them to deification s theological source
